[DUPLAP'S CABLE NEWS SPECIAL.] LONDON, Dec. 2. —Great disappointment was sed to the representatives of the press this morning by their being rigorously excluded m that corridor of the House of Commons on which is located Committee-room No. 16. ere the adjourned meeting of the Irish ers discussing Parnell's fate is being

Mr. Parnell's demeanor at the meeting is the abject of general comment, He was cool and alert in conducting the proings all through yesterday, but passionate and bitter when he considered that he was unfairly assailed by his opponents.

A remarkable feature of the meeting was the that in the case of the McCarthys, father and son were ranged on opposite sides, the elder, Justin, opposing the retention of Mr. Parnell in the leadership, while J. Huntly, the mber for Newry, was adverse to any change. It is said that the incident that told most against Parnell was the defection of William O'Brien, who was expected by the leader's riends to stand by him. As to Dillon, his going over to the enemy ned to produce but little effect.

Michael Davitt pervaded the lobbles of the House of Commons last evening, taking aux-ious counsel with political friends, and eagerly awaiting the result of the meeting of the Irish

During the adjournment for dinner, Mr. Parnell passed Davitt in one of the corridors, but neither man took the slightest notice of the other's presence.

It will now be war to the knife between the two men, and those best acquainted with Irish tics assert, that so unrelenting will be the fend that one or the other will soon be forced out of active service.

The first half hour of the meeting to-day occupied by the reading of telegrams and messages from Ireland and America, and the manifesto of Messrs, Dillon and O Brien was read again and received with enthus cheering by the anti-Parnellites. When Mr. Campbell, the Secretary, had finished reading, the debate was resumed by James O'Kelly, member for Roscommon. O'KELLY SPRAKS POR PARNELL.

He declared it would be the basest ingratitude to abandon Mr. Parnell simply because a number of English politicians, who had ght an alliance with the Nationalist mem bers for their own advantage, now thought at to abandon the position they had taken, and had intrigued to bring about the downfall of the trusted leader of the Irish people. calling upon him to support Mr. Parnell for the leadership or resign his seat.

LATRE.—It is now stated that all hope of reaching a decision on the main question has been abandoned for to-day, as it is reported that Mr. Parnell proposes to move an adjournment to allow members to take part in the debate in the House on the second reading of the Balfour bill for the purchase of land and the Congested Districts of Ireland bill.
